Company

Conference realignment was just like a time bomb ticking away for the past few years. You knew it wouldn't end with the Big Ten, Big East and Southeastern conferences, and the past offseason proved that hunch correct.

The splintering of the Southwest Conference precipitated a pair of league expansions which moved Division I-A football another step closer to its final resting place. In 1996, Texas, Texas A&M, Baylor and Texas Tech will join the Big Eight, while Southern Methodist, Texas Christian and Rice will join UNLV, San Jose State and Tulsa in the giant, 16-team Western Athletic Conference. Houston decided life as an independent was better than either of those two options.

Meanwhile, the Big East staved off any future break-up when it made football members West Virginia and Rutgers full conference affiliates, ending talk that the league's football schools might secede from the conference.

While those three developments helped bring I-A football closer to super-conference-style configurations, the realignment frenzy isn't over yet. The Great Midwest is talking about forming a football confederation from some of the remaining independents, and I-AA schools North Texas (1995) and Central Florida (1996) will follow newcomer Northeast Louisiana into the big time in the next two years. The Big Ten still has 11 teams, hardly a neat number, and the Pacific-10 has been talking about expansion for a few years.

Stay tuned.

Perhaps the most popular offseason hobby of college football media and fans was to debate whether the Miami (Fla.) dynasty—four national titles in 11 seasons—had ended.

The evidence was compelling. The Hurricanes lost three games in 1993, a feat akin to six losses at any normal school. And the humiliating 29-0 skunking at the hands of Arizona in the Fiesta Bowl was particularly damning. Former Hurricane Bubba McDowell, now a safety with the Houston Oilers, actually considered driving from Texas to the south Florida campus after the bowl debacle. That's how mad he was that the current Hurricanes were ruining what McDowell and other former players had constructed.

But reports of Miami's demise may be premature. Hurricanes fans were upset back in 1985, when a 10-2 season was punctuated by a foul 35-7 loss to Tennessee in the Sugar Bowl. All Miami did the following year was go 11-0 in the regular season and come within a Vinny Testaverde interception or six of the national title. Three titles followed in the next five years.

This year's team will be more focused and talented than last year's unit, and the Hurricanes are prohibitive favorites to win the Big East. Only non-conference tussles with Washington and Florida State could prevent them from going undefeated again.

Hurricanes bashers had better speak up now. There won't be much to say this time next year.

Notre Dame's Lou Holtz spent most of January 1 trying to convince pollsters that his team's regular-season victory over Florida State had more weight in the race for the national championship than the Seminoles' Orange Bowl triumph over Nebraska. Sorry, Lou. Bobby Bowden got his national title, and the Fighting Irish went without. When you're trying to win an election, it helps to be appealing to the electorate. Holtz's whining and propensity for making weak opponents sound like the Cowboys are tough to stomach.

This year, however, Holtz may be able to act like Genghis Khan and still finish No. 1. Notre Dame may be a little thin in the trenches, but talent abounds everywhere else, particularly at running back, where five different players could hit the 100-yard mark on a given Saturday.

His team looks good, all right, provided quarterback Ron Powlus delivers. The heralded sophomore was poised to take over the starting job last year before suffering a broken right collarbone. Though healed, Powlus didn't take part in contact drills during the spring. He still heads into the season as the Irish passer.

What Powlus lacks in experience, he makes up for in ability. A superb prospect at Berwick (Pa.) High School, Powlus could throw long and short, soft and hard, and even run the ball when needed. He won't be perfect, but Holtz should be able to craft an offense around him and those talented running backs that puts Notre Dame atop the collegiate world.

What do Tyrone Wheatley, J.J. Stokes, Joey Galloway and Eric Zeier have in common?

They're all back on college campuses this fall, playing their senior seasons instead of earning a paycheck in the National Football League. And each one has a shot at the Heisman Trophy.

Michigan's Wheatley, a devastating combination of speed and power, would've been one of the top five picks in the draft had he come out. Instead, he'll help the Wolverines navigate through a tough opening schedule—Boston College, Notre Dame, Colorado. Big performances in those games could catapult him into the lead, much as a big start helped Michigan's Desmond Howard in 1991.

Zeier stayed at Georgia because pro scouts thought he needed to improve his arm strength. He certainly doesn't have to bulk up his stats. The senior should top 400 yards at least twice this season and could grab the Heisman Trophy if he cuts down on interceptions and Georgia wins seven or eight games.

UCLA's Stokes and Ohio State's Galloway are big-play receivers who should grab double-figures in touchdown passes this season. The tall, powerful Stokes makes NFL coaches drool, but he could improve his concentration. Galloway is quick and sure-handed, but his size may scare away a few scouts.

All four will terrorize opponents this season and should be attractive draft candidates in 1995. They'll all probably have their college degrees, too. That counts for something.

J.J. Stokes' size and strength make NFL coaches drool.

It's going to be a hot one on the gridiron today.

ATLANTIC COAST

■ Team on the rise: North Carolina has quietly become one of the nation's most consistent teams, and the Tar Heels' success at recruiting outside of Tobacco Road should keep it among the nation's top 15 for a few more years. ■ Team on the decline: Hey, didn't Georgia Tech win a national championship this decade? The Yellow Jackets have had two consecutive 5-6 seasons, and a winning year isn't likely in 1994, either. ■ Killer schedule: Florida State's non-conference schedule is the nation's toughest, featuring showdowns with Miami (Fla.), Florida and Notre Dame. ■ Dream schedule: North Carolina's non-league menu—Texas Christian, Tulane and Southern Methodist—is a piece of cake. ■ Matchup of the year: Call it a three-way tie. The Seminoles visit Miami (Fla.) October 8, meet Notre Dame in Orlando November 12 and host Florida November 26. ■ Mismatch of the year: Duke at Florida State, October 29. Expect the Seminoles to hang up about 55 points. ■ Upset of the year: Wake Forest over North Carolina State, October 15. Jim Caldwell stakes his claim with a win over the Wolfpack, which has played in six straight bowl games. ■ Bowl bound: Florida State is a January 1 or 2 lock, with North Carolina and Clemson outside shots. Virginia should get a minor bid. ■ Biggest shoes to fill: So what if Florida State's Danny Kanell completed 73.5 percent of his passes last year in mop-up work—and a start against woeful Maryland—for Heisman Trophy winner Charlie Ward. Let's see if he can do it for a full season. ■ Most underrated player: Virginia linebacker Randy Neal tied for the ACC lead in tackles last year with 139, yet few people outside of the league have ever heard of him. ■ Offensive player of the year: Maryland quarterback Scott Milanovich may play for the miserable Terrapins, but he'll throw for about 4,000 yards in Mark Duffner's run-and-shoot offense. ■ Defensive player of the year: Bobby Bowden smiled when linebacker Derrick Brooks decided to stay around for his senior season. Now, Brooks will make ACC offenses cry. ■ Coach of the year: North Carolina's Mack Brown has done a sensational job turning the Tar Heels from one-win laughingstocks to perennial top 25 members. ■ Coach on the hotseat: They don't just want wins at Clemson, they want a national title. Tommy West replaces Ken Hatfield and is charged with unseating Florida State as the league's top team. They don't call it Death Valley for nothing. ■ Odds and ends: Florida State outscored its conference foes, 391-51, last season. . . North Carolina is the only team in the country to return a pair of 1,000-yard rushers, talented Curtis Johnson and Leon Johnson.

Maryland's

BIG EAST

■ Team on the rise: Virginia Tech blasted Indiana in last year's Independence Bowl and returns enough talent—most notably quarterback Maurice DeShazo—to challenge for a January 1 or 2 bowl.

■ Team on the decline: After last year's dream season, West Virginia will slip back to the Big East's midsection, a victim of heavy graduation losses. Don't worry, the Mountaineers will be back near the top again in two or three years. ■ Killer schedule: Even though it opens the season with Georgia Southern, Miami (Fla.) must play Arizona State, Washington and Florida State, in addition to its seven Big East games.

■ Dream schedule: West Virginia may play Nebraska in the Kickoff Classic, but the Mountaineers also face Ball State, Maryland, Missouri and Louisiana Tech.

■ Matchup of the year: No one in the conference should touch Miami, so the Hurricanes' October 8 game against Florida State will again have huge national ramifications.

■ Mismatch of the year: There are plenty, but Miami's September 3 visit from Division I-AA power Georgia Southern stands out. The win will be the Hurricanes' 58th straight at home, an NCAA record.

■ Upset of the year: Temple over anyone. Seriously, folks, Ron Dickerson maintained his optimism through a hellacious 1-10 rookie season, and even though the Owls will be somewhat improved, they're still a long way from competitive.

■ Bowl bound:

Miami takes its customary major slot, while Virginia Tech and Boston College should wind up in games—maybe on January 1 or 2. Syracuse and West Virginia are darkhorses.

■ Biggest shoes to fill: A tie: Mark Hartsell, Matt Hasselbeck and Scott Mutryn vie for Glenn Foley's old passing job at Boston College, while Kevin Mason will most likely replace versatile quarterback Marvin Graves for Syracuse.

■ Most underrated player: Temple linebacker Lance Johnstone moves to the middle this season and is a big play waiting to happen.

■ Offensive player of the year: Virginia Tech's DeShazo could throw for nearly 2,500 yards and is one of the best option quarterbacks in the country.

■ Defensive player of the year: Miami defensive tackle Warren Sapp fits nicely into the Hurricanes' lineage—Jerome Brown, Russell Maryland, Cortez Kennedy—at that spot.

■ Coach of the year: Frank Beamer finally gets his due as the man in charge at Virginia Tech.

■ Coach on the hotseat: Rutgers' Doug Graber has been promising contention for a while now, and the Scarlet Knights have delivered nothing but mediocrity.

■ Odds and ends: Pittsburgh will invest about $17 million in upgrading its outdated facilities. . . . Rutgers christens its newly renovated, 42,000-seat, on-campus stadium September 3 against Kent.

BIG EIGHT

■ Team on the rise: With the last residue of probation gone from the Oklahoma program, the Sooners can get back to challenging for the Big Eight title. They won't win it this year, but the future looks bright. ■ Team on the decline: You can't get any lower than eighth place in an eight-team conference, but Oklahoma State is trying. ■ Killer schedule: Oklahoma visits Syracuse and Texas A&M, journeys to Dallas for its annual feud with resurgent Texas and hosts 1993 bowl participant Texas Tech. ■ Dream schedule: Iowa State could enter league play with a 3-1 record.

Colorado's
Shannon Clavelle

Aside from its game with intrastate rival Iowa, the Cyclones meet Northern Iowa, Western Michigan and Rice. ■ Matchup of the year: Colorado at Michigan, September 24. Two national championship contenders meet in Ann Arbor in former Wolverines assistant Bill McCartney's homecoming. ■ Mismatch of the year: Pacific at Nebraska, September 24. The Huskers have to score 60 on somebody every year. This year, it's Pacific. ■ Upset of the year: Kansas over Colorado, November 12. The Jayhawks slipped a little last year but return enough to shake up the visiting Buffaloes. ■ Bowl bound: Nebraska and Colorado are locks for January 1 or 2 games, and Oklahoma has an outside shot. Figure Kansas or Kansas State for the conference's fourth bid.

■ Biggest shoes to fill: Junior college transfer Garrick McGee will replace record-setting passer Cale Gundy at Oklahoma. Expect more running and less gunning from the new-comer. ■ Most underrated player: Kansas outside linebacker Don Davis had 10 tackles for loss last year and is an excellent complement to talented inside man Steve Harvey. ■ Offensive player of the year: Nebraska quarterback Tommie Frazier proved his throwing ability in the Orange Bowl loss to Florida State. He puts immense pressure on opponents with his multiple skills. ■ Defensive player of the year: Colorado tackle Shannon Clavelle is nearly impossible to block cleanly and is the main man on the nation's top defensive front. ■ Coach of the year: Oklahoma's Gary Gibbs has weathered the post-probation storm with patience and class and is ready now to reap the benefits. ■ Coach on the hotseat: That Iowa State's Jim Walden actually has a job this year is a shocker. Another disappointing season like last year, and he's gone, even if his contract runs through 1997. ■ Odds and ends: Missouri's Larry Smith is the first new coach in the league since 1989. . . . Last season, four Big Eight teams—Nebraska, Colorado, Oklahoma and Kansas—were ranked in the final top 20 polls for the first time since 1976.

BIG TEN

■ Team on the rise: With its overwhelming defense and versatile Johnny Johnson at quarterback, Illinois should find itself in a bowl game this year. ■ Team on the decline: Ohio State suffered huge losses in the offensive backfield, and Dan Wilkinson's departure crippled the defensive line. ■ Killer schedule: Gary Moeller must feel secure in his position, because Michigan faces eight bowl teams in 1994, including non-league foes Boston College, Notre Dame and Colorado. ■ Dream sched- ule: Iowa's non-conference slate features Central Michigan, Iowa State and Oregon, while its Big Ten schedule doesn't include Wisconsin or Ohio State. ■ Matchup of the year:

Wisconsin at Michigan, October 29. The Wolverines were humbled in Madison last year and should be seething when the Badgers come to Ann Arbor. ■ Mismatch of the year: Eastern Michigan at Wisconsin, September 10. Everyone needs a breather now and then, but games like this are uncalled for, especially for Rose Bowl champions. ■ Upset of the year: Illinois over Penn State, November 12. The temperature will probably be about 22 degrees, with forecasts of ice. Give the edge to the defense, and the Illini have one of the nation's best. ■ Bowl bound: Michigan, Penn State and Wisconsin should be in the majors, with Illinois, Ohio State, Michigan State and Iowa strong candidates for other berths. ■ Biggest shoes to fill: Ohio State may need three people to replace Wilkinson at defensive tackle. ■ Most underrated player: Michigan wide receiver Walter Smith is a tremendous blocker and one of the finest special teams performers in the country. ■ Offensive player of the year: Michigan tailback Tyrone Wheatley didn't stay around to be a decoy. He'll challenge for the Heisman Trophy. ■ Defensive player of the year: Illinois' do-everything linebacker Dana Howard leads the Big Ten's best defense. ■ Coach of the year: The Wolverines were a little too cocky last year, but if Moeller can navigate them through this year's brutal schedule all the way to Pasadena, he may deserve national coach of the year consideration. ■ Coach on the hotseat: John Cooper may have crowed over last year's Holiday Bowl win against Brigham Young, but that hardly satisfied Buckeyes followers. Six straight losses to Michigan, and he could be unemployed. ■ Odds and ends: Michigan guard Joe Marinaro, the team's best offensive lineman, blew out a knee during spring drills and is doubtful for this season. . . . For the first time in recent memory, Penn State's offense will be far ahead of its defense. The Nittany Lions have a pile of tailbacks and a dangerous passing combination in quarterback Kerry Collins and wideout Bobby Engram.

■ Team on the rise: Pacific's four conference losses in 1993 came by an average of five points. An experienced secondary and stronger offense should push the Tigers into the Big West's first division. ■ Team on the decline: You don't lose the nation's top offensive producer—quarterback Chris Vargas—and seven assistant coaches and remain a powerhouse. Nevada will need a few years to rebound. ■ Killer schedule: New Mexico State opens the season with trips to Florida and Arizona before settling into a league schedule that includes visits to Northern Illinois and defending champ Utah State. ■ Dream schedule: Nevada's transition year should be eased somewhat by a slate that includes I-AA patsies Northern Arizona and Boise State and I-A newcomer Northeast Louisiana. ■ Matchup of the year: Nevada at UNLV, November 19. This may not have championship implications, but it will sizzle nonetheless. After being hand-picked to succeed Chris Ault at Nevada, Jeff Horton bolted to UNLV, taking six assistants with him. The two haven't spoken since. ■ Mismatch of the year: Pacific at Nebraska, September 24. The Tigers must really need the money to head to Lincoln and absorb a 50-plus-point beating. ■ Upset of the year: Southwestern Louisiana over Texas Tech, November 12. The Red Raiders are rebuilding after their 1993 bowl campaign and won't be ready for the stingy Ragin' Cajuns defense. ■ Bowl bound: Southwestern Louisiana will combine its strong defense and easy schedule to reach the Las Vegas Bowl. No one else gets an invitation. ■ Biggest shoes to fill: Northern Illinois hopes Brian Grimes or Charles Talley can replace departed star tailback LeShon Johnson, while junior quarterback Mike Maxwell succeeds Nevada's Vargas and his 393.8 yards per game of total offense. ■ Most underrated player: Louisiana Tech middle linebacker Lance Reed is small (6-foot, 206 pounds), but he can hit. ■ Offensive player of the year: Even though Utah State's Profail Grier was suspended for spring practice, the Big West's top returning rusher should be in top form come September. ■ Defensive player of the year: Southwestern Louisiana free safety Orlanda Thomas, the 1993 national interception leader, returns to torment enemy passers. ■ Coach of the year: Southwestern Louisiana's Nelson Stokley will ride a bruising defense to the Big West title. ■ Coach on the hotseat: The heat is on UNLV's Horton for reneging on an agreement to coach his former team. ■ Odds and ends: After expanding in 1993, the Big West will contract some in 1996, when San Jose State and UNLV move into the 16-team WAC.

MID - A M E R I C A N

■ Team on the rise: Ohio University's progress may have been measured in small steps last year, but the young Bobcats are on the threshold of the first division. ■ Team on the decline: Akron looked good in its 1992 MAC debut, but injuries doomed them last season. Even with everyone healthy, things don't look too good this year. ■ Killer schedule: After opening with UNLV, Eastern Michigan heads to Rose Bowl champion Wisconsin for a whipping. League play is no kinder, with consecutive games against contenders Central Michigan, Bowling Green State and Miami of Ohio. ■ Dream schedule: Toledo's Gary Pinkel should have to buy his athletic director lunch for a month. Soft touches Indiana State and Liberty highlight the non-conference slate, with a week off before the MAC portion begins. ■ Matchup of the year: Western Michigan at Central Michigan, October 8. Geography makes this one good every year, but a matchup of the league's top quarterbacks enhances things this season. ■ Mismatch of the year: Eastern Michigan at Wisconsin, September 10. No wonder the Badgers have such a great record by mid-October. ■ Upset of the year: Eastern Michigan over Central Michigan, September 17. If the Eagles come back from Cheese Country healthy, they'll surprise the suspect Chippewas defense. ■ Bowl bound: Western Michigan will be playing the slot machines at the Las Vegas Bowl, while everyone else stays home. ■ Biggest shoes to fill: The three quarterback candidates to replace 1993 MAC Player of the Year Mike Neu of Ball State have attempted a total of three passes. ■ Most underrated player: Akron linebacker Phil Dunn has made 375 tackles the last two seasons and hasn't even earned an all-MAC honorable mention. Who votes for these things? ■ Offensive player of the year: Western Michigan's Jay McDonagh is an accurate passer capable of posting big numbers each time out. ■ Defensive player of the year: Aggressive Bowling Green State inside linebacker Vince Palko anchors a defense that allowed the fewest yards and points in the MAC last year. ■ Coach of the year: If Western Michigan's Al Molde can get the ground game cranked up, the Broncos will be heading to Vegas. ■ Coach on the hotseat: Akron's Gerry Faust had better get the Zips near the top of the MAC, or he could be back in the high school ranks, Notre Dame pedigree or not. ■ Odds and ends: Bowling Green State is undefeated (14-0-1) at home during Gary Blackney's three-year tenure. . . . Ball State's defense enters the season having not allowed a touchdown in 15 consecutive quarters.

■ Team on the rise: Southern Cal may not be ready for a national title run yet, but John Robinson has the Trojans in contention for the Rose Bowl. A super recruiting class has brought in great backfield speed, and a favorable league schedule should help immensely.

■ Team on the decline: Wasn't it just a few years ago that Oregon was showing off those gaudy green-and-gold uniforms in a bowl game? These days, it's open season on the Ducks for everyone, even lowly Oregon State.

■ Killer schedule: UCLA meets Tennessee and Nebraska in non-league games and must visit Washington, California and Arizona in the Pac-10. ■ Dream schedule: After a mid-level test against Georgia Tech to open the season, Arizona faces New Mexico State, Stanford, Oregon State, Colorado State and Washington State. Can you say "6-0?"

■ Matchup of the year: Arizona at Southern Cal, November 12. The Southern Cal-UCLA game may provide more thrills, but this one will decide the league's Rose Bowl representative.

■ Mismatch of the year: Portland State at Oregon, September 3. Because the Ducks will play Hawaii on the road, they were allowed a 12th game on the schedule. This visit from a Division II team hardly qualifies. ■ Upset of the year: Oregon State over Southern Cal, October 8. The Beavers were just 14 points from a 7-4 season last year and will use their potent option attack to ambush the Trojans. ■ Bowl bound: Arizona and UCLA are good bets for January 1 or 2 dates, while Southern Cal and California should get invited somewhere. Washington remains ineligible for postseason play, thanks to its probation. ■ Biggest shoes to fill: It may take three players to replace talented Southern Cal touchdown-maker Johnnie Morton. The flanker was a big play waiting to happen.

■ Most underrated player: Oregon State halfback J.J. Young just missed 1,000 yards last year and should blast past that standard this season. ■ Offensive player of the year: UCLA split end J.J. Stokes can do it all, which makes him a solid Heisman Trophy candidate. ■ Defensive player of the year: Arizona's Tedy Bruschi is the main man on the league's top defensive front. ■ Coach of the year: After years of trying, Arizona finally makes it to the Rose Bowl, and Dick Tomey gets the national recognition he deserves. ■ Coach on the hotseat: Rich Brooks may end up having to fire himself at Oregon after this season. The only coach/athletic director in the league has seen his team tumble from contender to disaster. ■ Odds and ends: Southern Cal is hoping the $35 million in damages to the L.A. Coliseum will be repaired in time for its September 3 home opener against Washington.

SOUTHEASTERN

■ Team on the rise: If multi-talented Kentucky quarterback Pookie Jones returns for his senior season—he's a superb baseball player—the Wildcats may even make the basketball team proud. ■ Team on the decline: Louisiana State used to be one of the nation's most exciting teams, but the Tigers are quickly losing pace with the rest of college football's top league. ■ Killer schedule: Okay, so no one in the SEC ever really plays a nightmare slate, but Georgia has it pretty tough this year. The Bulldogs play all the league heavies—Florida, Alabama, Auburn and Tennessee—along with Clemson and Georgia Tech. ■ Dream schedule: Auburn hosts seven games and fills its non-conference card with Northeast Louisiana, East Tennessee State and East Carolina. ■ Mismatch of the year: Take your pick: Alabama bludgeoning UT-Chattanooga September 3, or Auburn hammering East Tennessee State September 24. ■ Upset of the year: Georgia over Tennessee, September 10. Bulldogs quarterback Eric Zeier throws for 400-plus yards, and the Volunteers stumble after their season opener at UCLA. ■ Bowl bound: Figure Alabama, Florida and Auburn for January 1 or 2 dates, while Georgia, Tennessee, Kentucky and Arkansas will qualify for the minors. ■ Biggest shoes to fill: Tennessee fifth-year senior Jerry Colquitt is happy quarterback Heath Shuler left for the NFL a year early. Now, can he handle the pressure? ■ Most underrated player: Look for Mississippi linebacker Abdul Jackson to emerge from the shadows of graduated teammates Cassius Ware and Dewayne Dotson and have a big year for the Rebels. ■ Offensive player of the year: Georgia's Zeier should top the 3,000-yard passing mark this year and will be good for a couple of 400-plus yard efforts. He's the league's top Heisman Trophy candidate. ■ Defensive player of the year: Mississippi's Jackson will lead the league in tackles and should make enough big plays to help the Rebels' offense improve its productivity. ■ Coach of the year: Kentucky's Bill Curry was vilified at Alabama, but he's doing a great job in Lexington. This year, the patience pays off. ■ Coach on the hotseat: Get that resume polished up, Curley Hallman. If Louisiana State stumbles to a fourth-straight losing record, you'll be interviewing for assistant jobs. ■ Odds and ends: Georgia and Florida play in Gainesville this year, while the Gator Bowl in Jacksonville undergoes remodeling to prepare for the NFL's Jaguars in 1995. . . . Tennessee's Neyland Stadium sheds artificial turf and goes with grass for the first time since 1967. . . . Auburn is back on television this season after a one-year, probation-induced absence.

■ Team on the rise: Texas appears finally ready to break out of its funk. The Longhorns should have a solid passing game, and their aggressive defense will make plenty of big plays. ■ Team on the decline: It's nice to see that the SWC's final two seasons will feature at least one team on probation. The sanctions won't derail Texas A&M, but they'll slow the Aggies down some. ■ Killer schedule: Texas Tech opens with resurgent New Mexico, then meets Nebraska and Oklahoma on consecutive weekends. ■ Dream schedule: Other than a trip to Southern Cal,

Texas A&M's
Rodney Thomas

Baylor is in pretty good shape. The Bears' opening trio of Louisiana Tech, San Jose State and Oklahoma State is soft. ■ Matchup of the year: Texas at Baylor, November 24. Since Texas A&M is on probation, the SWC moved this game to Thanksgiving for television exposure, tradition be damned. It should be for the Cotton Bowl berth. ■ Mismatch of the year: Southern Methodist at UCLA, September 10. The Mustangs should be trampled by the speedy Bruins. ■ Upset of the year: Texas over Colorado, October 1. The Longhorns signal their return to prominence by stunning the visiting Buffaloes, who'll be particularly susceptible to Texas' improved passing attack. ■ Bowl bound: This is tricky. Baylor or Texas will grab the Cotton Bowl berth on January 2, but the second-place team can hardly be considered major-bowl timber. If Texas Tech can overcome huge losses it may get a minor bid. That's it. ■ Biggest shoes to fill: Texas Tech's Byron Morris rushed for 1,752 yards and 22 touchdowns last year, numbers that true freshman Byron Hanspard can only dream of posting. ■ Most underrated player: Texas sixth-year linebacker Kevin Watler's knees are shakier than a southern California skyscraper, but he can still drill enemy running backs. ■ Offensive player of the year: Texas A&M tailback Rodney Thomas may not attract too much attention because of the Aggies' pending probation, but he's a game-breaker. ■ Defensive player of the year: Texas Tech linebacker Zach Thomas got bigger and quicker during the offseason and should be a tackling machine. ■ Coach of the year: Texas' John Mackovic completes his rebuilding job with a trip to Dallas for the Cotton Bowl. ■ Coach on the hotseat: Houston's Kim Helton inherited a mess when he replaced John Jenkins. The school will have no conference affiliation in two seasons, and the huge football complex under construction won't suit a losing team. ■ Odds and ends: Southern Methodist, Texas Christian and Rice will join UNLV, Tulsa and San Jose State in the engorged Western Athletic Conference in 1996.

WESTERN ATHLETIC

■ Team on the rise: Utah has a great quarterback in Mike McCoy, a versatile big-play threat in Henry Lusk and a defense that can shine when inspired. ■ Team on the decline: Wyoming's passing-injected 1993 bowl season will be followed up by a one-back style drop to the WAC's second division. ■ Killer schedule: New Mexico may be vastly improved, but the schedule gods want to keep the Lobos down. Seven of their 12 games are on the road, including Brigham Young, Fresno State, Wyoming and Hawaii, against whom they're an aggregate 0-29 in recent meetings.

■ Dream schedule: Hawaii needs to find a new quarterback for its fast-break offense, but eight home games will make the adjustment a little easier. ■ Matchup of the year: San Diego State at Brigham Young, November 10. The Aztecs are without Marshall Faulk, but quarterback Tim Gutierrez can put up big-time numbers. Look for both teams to score in the 40s. ■ Mismatch of the year: Texas-El Paso against anybody. The Miners are dreadful—again. ■ Upset of the year: New Mexico over Fresno State, October 29. The Lobos avenge the humiliation of a 94-17 loss in 1991. ■ Bowl bound: The WAC won't match its five-team bonanza in 1992, but Brigham Young, San Diego State, Utah and Fresno State are good bets for postseason invitations. ■ Biggest shoes to fill: All Adrian Claiborne has to do at Fresno State is replace one of the nation's top quarterbacks and the sixth player taken in the 1994 NFL draft in Trent Dillfer. ■ Most underrated player: Air Force linebacker Steve Russ overcame injuries last year to anchor the Falcons' defense. This year, he'll help the academy fight back into the WAC's first division. ■ Offensive player of the year: They specialize in quarterbacks at Brigham Young, and John Walsh is the latest model. He threw for 3,727 yards and 28 touchdowns last year. ■ Defensive player of the year: Utah defensive end Luther Elliss should be playing in another league. He's too good to be in the defense-less WAC. ■ Coach of the year: Utah's Ron McBride has brought the Utes into contention in the WAC. This year, they could challenge for the title. ■ Coach on the hotseat: San Diego State newcomer Ted Tollner is best known for his problems at Southern Cal. Now he has a chance to prove he can lead a team to the top. After three disappointing finishes in the Marshall Faulk era, Aztecs fans are getting impatient. ■ Odds and ends: By adding Texas Christian, Rice, Southern Methodist, Tulsa, San Jose State and UNLV for the 1996 season, the WAC becomes the nation's biggest (16 teams) and geographically-largest (four time zones) conference in Division I-A.

■ Team on the rise: Last year's Liberty Bowl win over Michigan State capped a giant turnaround for Louisville, which may now be on the threshold of establishing itself as a consistent producer every year. The Cardinals continue to recruit well, the schedule is improving, and Louisville moves into a 50,000-seat, on-campus stadium in 1995. ■ Team on the decline: Cincinnati had a breakthrough season in 1993, but too much went right for the Bearcats, from career performances by a bunch of seniors to a cushy schedule. New Coach Barry Minter faces an upgraded slate and several depth-chart gaps.

■ Killer schedule: Welcome to Division I-A, Northeast Louisiana. The Indians open with consecutive road trips to Colorado, Auburn and Georgia. ■ Dream schedule: The Army hasn't faced such an easy road since Desert Storm. Three I-AA opponents dot the ledger.

■ Matchup of the year: Notre Dame at Florida State, take two. The Irish visit Orlando on November 12—they wouldn't go to Tallahassee—and ABC can't wait. ■ Mismatch of the year: Notre Dame's October 29 home date with Navy should be a fitting prelude to Halloween.

■ Upset of the year: East Carolina over Syracuse, September 24. The Pirates played a million kids last year and should be deep and dangerous when the Orangemen visit early on. ■ Bowl bound: Notre Dame gets a January 1 or 2 bid, even if it loses three games. Louisville should grab another minor invitation, but that's it.

■ Biggest shoes to fill: Just look under center. Ron Powlus must replace surprisingly effective Kevin McDougal at Notre Dame, and Marty Lowe steps in for record-setter Jeff Brohm at Louisville.

■ Most underrated player: Southern Mississippi defensive tackle Michael Tobias is an impressive run stopper who can also rush the passer (seven sacks in 1993). ■ Offensive player of the year: Notre Dame tailback Lee Becton is a legitimate Heisman Trophy candidate, particularly if Lou Holtz gives his new quarterback time to develop.

■ Defensive player of the year: Notre Dame linebacker Justin Goheen is rock-solid against the run and can drop into pass coverages well. ■ Coach of the year: Navy could finish with its first above-.500 mark since 1982, a credit to George Chaump's perseverance.

■ Coach on the hotseat: Injuries killed East Carolina last year, but Steve Logan enters his third year without a winning season. Another bad one could upset Pirates fans, who still have fond memories of an 11-1 campaign in 1991. ■ Odds and ends: North Texas joins the ranks of the independents in 1995, moving up from I-AA, with Central Florida arriving in 1996. . . . Last year marked Memphis' first back-to-back winning seasons since 1976.
